

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A cuticle removing device includes a first set having a first handle and a first scrubbing stick connected to a first end of the first handle. A recess is defined in the first handle and communicates an opening defined in a second end of the first handle. A second set has a second handle and a second scrubbing stick connected to a first end of the second handle. The second set is removably received in the recess. A ring is mounted to an outer periphery of the second handle and engaged with an inner periphery of the recess.